BY JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY.

With the names that are writ in the book of gold;
And each one bears in mind or hand,
A pain of the dear Bohemian land,
The scholar first, with his book—a youth
Aliame with his glory of harvested truth;
A girl with a picture, a man with a play,
A boy with a wolf he has modeled in clay;
A smith with a marvelone hill and sword,
A player a king, a ploughman, a ford—
And the player is King when the door is past.
The ploughman is crowned and the ford is last!
I'd rather fail'in Bohemia than fail in another Lind;

I'd rather fail'in Bohema than fail in another land;
I'd rather are no titles inherited there,
On on the rope of the brainless heir;
No gilded dullard native born
To stare at his fellows with leaden scorn!
Bohemia has not but adopted sons:
Ita limits, where fancy's bright stream runs!
Ita honors, not granered for thrift or trade,
But for beauty and truth men's south have been made.
To the empty heart in a jeweled breast
There is vulle, may be, in a purchased creat;
But the thirsty of sout soon learn to know
The noistureless froth of the social show;
The vulgar sham of the pompous feast,
Where the heaviest purse it the highest priest;
The organized charity, acrimped and leed,
in the name of a cautious, stricted Ciris!
The smile restrained, the respectable cant,
When the friend in need is a friend in want;
Where the only aim is to keep afloat,
And a brother may drown with a cry in his thost.

Oh, I long for the glow of a kindly heart and the threat.

Oh, I long for the glow of a kindly heart and the grasp of a friendly hand.

And 7d rather live in Bohemia than in any other land.

Beecher's Bible Studies, The Wreck of the Grosvenor, and Other Notable Works. Literary Notes.

"Gossip in a Library," by Edmund Gosse, is a series of short studies on the history and contents of famous or curious books. One of the peculiarities of the volume is that it was written by an English author at the suggestion of an American editor. In some respects it is a companion book to Leslie Storbed's "Hours in a Library," however dissimilar the treatment of the topics may be. Mr. Gosse's style is singularly charming, easy and graceful. It is as though he were talking to a select audience of friends, chatting familiarly about the book which has been taken from the shelves at random. None but rare and curious books are considered in this volume, which contains a wonderful fund of information written in such an attractive manner as to interest the most indifferent reader. The publishers are Lovell, Coryell & Co., New York. English author at the suggestion of an

Since the days of Captain Marryatt no more entertaining sea tale than "The Wreck of the Grosvenor," by W. Clark Wreck of the Grosvenor," by W. Clark Russell, has been written. The author has seen the sea and sailed the sea and gives his readers the benefit of a rich experience and vivid imagination. He paints some beautiful pictures, which he colors with such an artistic pen that they seem to stand out in bold relief on canvas. The story is of thrilling interest, and woven into the tragic and descriptive elements is a love episode which has the charm of peculiar situations which developed the passion between the hero and the heroine. The mutiny and the causes which led to it, and the subsequent wreck show the and the subsequent wreck show the purpose the author had in view when he undertook histask, namely: to denounce the practice of conscienceless ship owners who not only send rotten hulks to sea, but provision them with rotten food. The book is from the press of Lovell, Coryell & Co., New York.

In these days when biblical criticism is becoming almost general, and when the most accomplished scholars differ the most accomplished scholars differ as to the inspiration of certain portions of the Scriptures, "Bible Studies," a compilation of Old Testament readings with familiar comment by the late Rev. Henry Word Beecher, makes a timely and welcome appearance. Those lectures on the Old Testament books were delivered by the Plymouth church preacher on Sunday evenings during the autumn, winter and spring of 1878-79, and have never before appeared in print. The volume of over 400 pages is prefaced with two newly published sermons "The Inspiration of the Bible," and "How to Read the Bible," which may serve as a lamp to guide the feet of those who are in painful doubt in an age that seems to run to doubt more than faith. The volume is published by Fords, Howard & Hulbert, New York.

"The American Siberia" is the rather

"The American Siberia" is the rather startling title of a work by J. C. Powell. And what is more startling still the habitation is in tropical Florida. But when the suggestive title deals with a convict mining camp the mind is well prepared to take in a recital of horrors and distress comparable with the Russian exiles in Siberian mines. The author is competent to deal with his subject from the fact that he was for fourteen years in charge of a convict camp. Being an advocate of the convict lease system he cannot be accused of exaggeration, and therefore what he says ought to carry weight. In this work Kennan's sketches of exile life in Siberia have a counterpart in the cruelties of Florida prison life. The convict lease system is one of the problems of the present day, and the perusal of Captain Powell's narrative will throw a good deal of light on a subject which is generally discussed from a condemnatory point of view. Donohus, Henneberry & Co., Chicago, are the publishers. And what is more startling still the

All who have read "Bootles Baby" will be interested in John Strange Winwork "Only Human." It is essentially a tove story, but its chief merit lies in the delicate analysis of the passion of revenge. It is thoroughly human in interest and pleasing in plot. Like most British writers who deal in American scenes and attempt to describe the conditions of life in this country, Mrs. Stannard falls into amusing preposterousness. She sends one of her characters to America, where in five years he attains immense wealth from a "claim" which produces gold, siter and perofessis. Any one of these wealth-producers would have been sufficient to enrich her hero without making the ridiculous and impossible combination. However the motif of the work is healthy and the story told conveys a lesson to reckless speculators. The book is mublished by J. B. Lippencott, Philadelphia.

The aim of the author of "A Lucky ter's (Mrs. Stannard's) more pretentious

The aim of the author of "A Lucky Mishap" is not only laudable but edu-Mishap" is not only laudable but edu-cational and corrective, and the book should be put in the hands of every im-pressionable and high strung youth. The object of "A Lucky Mishap" is to lift the romantic mantle that has been thrown around the lawless acts of Jesse Jamss, Cole Younger and others of that ilk whose deeds have been exploited by jurid and conscinceless writers absted by sordid publishers. In this work all the glam-ur is torn from the stage and train rob ber, and the misery and sor-row that such violators of written and nawritten laws entail, not only upon themselves but others who are near and dear to them, is graphically teld. Don-chue, Henneberry & Co., Chicago, are the publishers.

It is wonderful to note how many typographical and grammatical mistakes creep into some of the popular publications of the present day. It is an evidence of the haste to be in the

An astute German newspaper, the Vossiche Zeitung, objects to the translation of "Tom Brown's School Days" into the language of the Fatherland on the ground that it is "not without danger to growing youths," and should be given only to such boys as are sure not to imitate the "mad tricks" of its hero.

hero.

Apropos of the appearance of Beecher's "Bible Studies" are the remarks of Rev. J. Howard Hobbs in the Hartford Seminary Courant, who says: "The supreme demand of the hour is for men who can preach 'Christ and Him Orucified," rather than a discussed and disputed confession. We need to chalk the line very clear this side the nebulous. We need not be apologetes,—we can be apostles.

"Perlycross," the title of Mr. R. D. Blackmore's forthcoming novel, in the name of the country parish in which the scene is laid. The curate of this parish is a character enthusiastically admired by the author's friends. The same cool-headed and judicious persons are also chanting aloud the praises of Mr. Blackmore's new heroine. Mr. Blackmore is the author of that popular novel "Loma Doone."

novel "Loma Doone."

If the name of the late Friedrich Schlog!, the Dickens of Vienna, was not known by translation abroad as it should be, the reason will be found in the fact that he wrote especially for his native town and his co-citizens, the Viennese. He was master of that peculiarly pleasing style of writing which combines an inexhaustible sense of humor with a most faithful description of the Austrian character, and a profound knowledge of the mode of life, the shortcomings and the virtues of the lower and middle classes of this interesting capital.

The "Bower Manuscript," the oldest The "Bower Manuscript," the oldest Indian manuscript yet discovered is described in the last proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengai. It is written on birch bark, and was dug out of the foot of what is generally regarded as a Buddhist stupa, just outside a subterranean city near Kuchar. The characters are Sanskrit of a very archaic type. Dr. Hoerale, of Calcutta, has succeeded in deciphering them, and finds the manuscript consists of two medical works, some proverbial sayings, and the story of a charm against snake bite.

The Use and Abuse of Whiskey.

This subject could be dwelt upon to a considerable length, and yet much would remain untold, but all agree that would remain untold, but all agree that the use, the proper use of pure rye whiskey is an absolute necessity, especially so now, when nature insists upon being stimulated. All regular physicians prescribe rye whiskey, and justly claim that Klein's Silver Age and Duquesne Whiskies are most reliable. They do this not only because they have tried them but because the leading hospitals use them—find them the best stimulants in the world. Silver Age sells for $1.50 and Duquesne for $1.25 per full quart. For sale by all dealers and druggists. Ask for them or send to Max Klein, $2 Federal Street, Allegheny, Pa.
